

ONE DAY

One day, if the future allows,

One day if we get time,

One day when we're ready,

Let's have a talk, let's talk.

On that day, let's talk about fake love,

How we become faithful and loyal,

To people we thought were real,

Only to be rewarded with pain and cheating.

Again, we'll talk about fake love,

How we walked miles for them,

But they couldn't even take a step for us,

How they betrayed us while in their care.

Let's not forget the ungrateful people,

How we made sacrifices for them,

But still made us feel worthless and stupid,

They served us disrespect and badmouthing.

That same day, if we have enough time,

Let's talk how we survived the pain,

How we handled the damages cost by betrayal,

How we became strong and whole again.
